

“Telling Your Story” through

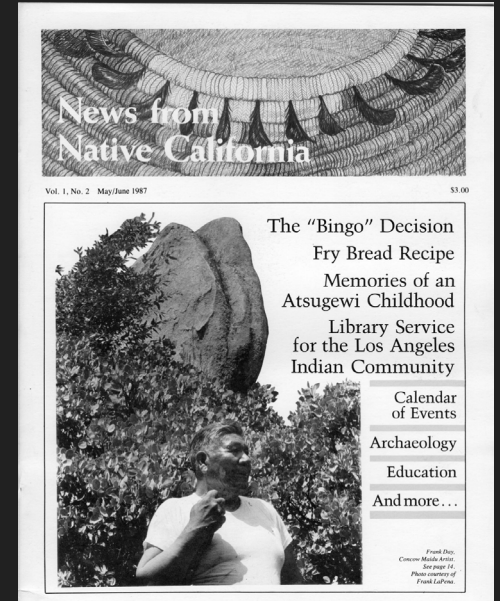

Terria Smith

Editor, News from Native California

News from Native California background:

- The magazine was founded in 1987
- Published by the Berkeley Roundhouse Program with Heyday Books
- Quarterly publication that focuses solely on tribes that are Indigenous to California
- Primarily an arts and cultures focus

Environmental stories in News:

- Unless there is a theme for the print magazine, there is almost always room for tribal environmental stories
- We've had entire issues of the magazine dedicated to nature and the environment

Print edition

- Submission based magazine (meaning it's best if you write the stories yourself and turn them in to us)
- The magazine accepts a wide variety of features including: art, photography, poetry, news stories, essays, short stories, open letters, opinion pieces
- Final Deadlines:
 - Fall - August 1
 - Winter - November 1
 - Spring - March 1
 - Summer - May 1
- Send pitches to me at terria@heydaybooks.com
- For more info, visit: <http://newsfromnativecalifornia.com/submission-guidelines/>

Web edition

- Submissions accepted for the website any time
- Best option for breaking news, press releases, etc.
- In the event that you are unable to write a story yourself, we do have a couple of writers who can help out if they are available
- The website also has an events calendar, and we accept entries for this
- Send pitches, stories, and events to me at terria@heydaybooks.com

Social media:

- The magazine's following is not enormous, but we have a very engaged following. So if there is something you want people to know it can gain a lot of traction
- Please reach out to us via our platforms and - if the news is focusing on California tribal people - we will share it as soon as we can
